

WORKPLACE ANTI-BULLYING & ANTI-HARASSMENT POLICY

THE QUEENSLAND SPORTING CLUB INC (“the Company”) has adopted a zero tolerance towards all forms of bullying and harassment and seeks to provide an environment that is safe and enjoyable for all.

Workplace bullying has a detrimental effect on the Company and its people. It creates an unsafe working environment, results in a loss of trained and talented workers, causes the breakdown of teams and individual relationships, increase absenteeism and reduce efficiency and productivity. People who are bullied can become distressed, anxious, withdrawn and can lose self-esteem and self-confidence. Workplace bullying is also against the law.

For these reasons, bullying will not be tolerated by the Company.

The Company recognises that workplace bullying can take place through different methods of communication including face to face, email, text messaging and social media platforms. As such, this Policy applies to all methods of communication.

This Policy applies to behaviours that occur:

- In connection with work, even if it occurs outside normal working hours.
- During work activities, for example, when dealing with clients.
- At work related events and functions, for example, at Christmas parties; and
- On social media platforms where workers interact.
- This Policy applies to Members, employees, contractors and volunteers.

In so far as this policy imposes any obligations on the Company (i.e. those additional to those set out under legislation), those obligations are not contractual and do not give rise to any contractual rights. To the extent that this policy describes benefits and entitlements for employees (i.e. those additional to those set out under legislation), they are discretionary in nature and are also not intended to be contractual. The terms and conditions of employment that are intended to be contractual are set out in an employee’s written employment contract.

The Company may unilaterally introduce, vary, remove or replace this policy at any time.

WHAT IS WORKPLACE BULLYING?

Workplace bullying occurs when an individual, or a group of individuals, behaves unreasonably towards someone and that behaviour creates a risk to health and safety. This includes both physical and psychological abuse.

Bullying behaviours can take many different forms,

The following are some examples of direct bullying:

- Abusive, insulting or offensive language or comments.
- Violent, aggressive or intimidating conduct.
- Belittling or humiliating comments.
- Victimisation; and
- Practical jokes or initiation.

The following are some examples of indirect bullying:

- Unjustified criticism or complaints.
- Deliberately excluding someone from work-related activities.
- Withholding information that is vital for effective work performance.
- Setting unreasonable timelines or constantly changing deadlines.
- Setting tasks that are unreasonably below or beyond a person's skill level.
- Denying access to information, supervision, consultation or resources to the detriment of the worker.
- Spreading misinformation or malicious rumours; and
- Changing work arrangements such as rosters and leave to deliberately inconvenience a particular worker or workers.

The above examples are not intended to be an exhaustive list of bullying behaviours. They are indicative of the type of behaviours that may constitute bullying and are therefore unacceptable to the Company. If you are unsure whether behaviour not provided on this list constitutes bullying you should contact your direct supervisor.

WHAT IS NOT WORKPLACE BULLYING?

Reasonable action taken by managers or supervisors to direct the way work is carried out is not considered to be workplace bullying, if the action is taken in a reasonable and lawful way.

The following are some examples of reasonable management action:

- Realistic and achievable performance goals, standards and deadlines.
- Fair and appropriate rostering and allocation of working hours.
- Transferring a staff member to another area or role for operational reasons.
- Deciding not to select a staff member for a promotion where a fair and transparent process is followed.
- Informing a staff member about unsatisfactory work performance in an honest, fair and constructive way.
- Informing a staff member about unreasonable behaviour in an objective and confidential way.
- Implementing organisational changes or restructuring; and
- Taking disciplinary action, including suspension or terminating employment where appropriate or justified in the circumstances.

OTHER UNACCEPTABLE CONDUCT

Single incidents of unreasonable behaviour (such as harassment, violence or threatening behaviour) can also present a risk to health and safety and will not be tolerated.

Harassment is considered to be any form of behaviour that is:

- Unwanted.
- Offends, humiliates or intimidates; or
- Creates a hostile environment.

Where such conduct occurs towards a person due to a particular characteristic of that person (such as when based on sex, sexual orientation, pregnancy, marital status, age, disability, ethnicity or race,) this may be unlawful under discrimination and equal opportunity law, even if it is limited to a single incident.

For example, sexual harassment is unlawful even where it is not repeated conduct. All workers are required to comply with the Company's Equal Opportunity and Anti-Discrimination Policy which provides further guidance in this area.

The Company will also not tolerate any form of workplace violence. Workplace violence is considered to be any incident where a person is physically attacked or threatened in the workplace, whether this is directed to an employee, a member, aco-worker, subcontractor, client, customer or visitor

It includes (but is not limited to):

- Any type of direct physical contact such as punching, pushing, tripping, spitting or blocking of someone's way.
- Any form of unwanted physical contact.

MANAGERS' AND SUPERVISORS' ROLES

Managers and supervisors have an important role to play in terms of fostering a culture that does not tolerate or encourage harassment, bullying or workplace violence and should ensure that they do not engage in any conduct of this nature themselves.

Managers and supervisors should also ensure that workers understand this Policy and consequences of non-compliance. When managers and supervisors observe harassment, bullying or workplace violence occurring, they should take steps to prevent this conduct from continuing and warn the person or people involved of the consequences if the behaviour continues (including disciplinary measures up to and including termination of employment).

Managers and supervisors must also treat all grievances raised by workers in accordance with the Company's Grievance Handling Policy.
